

VERY

small

THINGS

Very small things that can lead us astray

A close-up photograph of a wooden handle protruding from a dark, textured wooden block. The handle is light-colored wood, possibly birch, and is positioned horizontally. The block is dark, almost black, with a rough, weathered texture. The background is a dark, textured surface, likely mulch or soil, with some small twigs and debris visible. The lighting is soft, highlighting the textures of the wood and the background.

Very small things
that can help us

Very small
things that do not appear
small

Very small things
that can escalate

